More of the Shame

Pocketbook Series
"In the era of totalitarian domination, capitalism has produced its own new religion: the Spectacle. The Spectacle is the terrestrial realization of ideology. Never has the world been so inverted. And like the 'critique of religion', the critique of the Spectacle is today the essential precondition of any critique."

We have arranged for the hypermarket at Boulogne to be opened specially for our party — what a chance to re-stock after Christmas with duty-free or cut-price goods from the continent.

There will be a chance to explore a little of Boulogne before it's back on the coach for a short journey to the hypermarket for shopping.

We hope to have a good two hours in the superstore, before returning to Boulogne for another brief look round.

Then it's back on the ship for the return journey home, arriving back in the four towns between 10 pm and midnight.

'Looking into a View-Master Viewer is like taking a journey in space and time. The 3D reels are so lifelike, they'll take the kids hundreds of places they've only ever dreamt about... Wherever they go, it doesn't cost much to get there.'

Now you can get away from it all without leaving anything behind.
"The Spectacle responds to the increasing dissatisfaction with its tendency towards lowest-common-denominator uniformity by diversifying itself. Struggles are channelled into struggles over the Spectacle, leading to the semi-autonomous development of separate spectacles tailor-made for specific social groupings."

Early every Friday evening, Channel 4, will be showing 'The Tube,' which isn't just a programme about underground music, it's a lively 1 3/4 hour topical pop/magazine show that will include video clips of big groups like the Stones, the Police and Queen. Plus live sessions from bands in the studio.

Who's going to be tuned in? Young people, the most difficult to reach audience there is.

The audience for your products: jeans, records, clothes, hi-fi, cosmetics, films, holidays, events....

hour-long episodes of the Royal Shakespeare Company's highly acclaimed 'Nicholas Nickleby' will present an ideal opportunity to reach viewers from higher social grades. ABC1's specifically.
Advertising on Channel 4 with LWT will not only be far cheaper. It will also be considerably more cost-effective. As you can see from the audience profiles for these three programmes, it will be far easier to target specific groups.

At minimum rates. With minimum wastage.

And on LWT you can reach them when they're making spending decisions. At the weekend.

With all the impact, colour and memorability of the most intrusive advertising medium, Television.

You've seen it on the big screen. Now it's all happening on your screen, because now The Empire Strikes Back™ where it really hurts. At home.

The Real World (7-7.30). If you've got a pair of the proper red/blue spectacles, you can join in a TV first – the first 3-D colour programme. Partly it's a showpiece: a lobster pokes a claw out from the screen. And if they get the sequence to work properly a terrorist will turn a convincing gun on you.
BUSINESS NEWS: Falklands Latest

LONDON bankers, fearing a collapse of the Argentine economy with disastrous results for the world's financial system, are pressing Mrs Thatcher to lift British sanctions on Argentina.

IN MILITARY terms there is no doubt that the fresh supplies of Exocet air-launched missiles now on their way from France to Argentina pose a threat to the Royal Naval squadron patrolling the Falklands. They would be the ideal weapon with which to carry out the sort of isolated but spectacular reprisal which might one day tempt the junta in Buenos Aires.

THE Argentine Navy owes a major British bank £6 million as final payment for two destroyers—in the same class as the ill-fated HMS Sheffield — now threatening the task force in the South Atlantic.

The officials said that the resumed sales were a commercial venture without political overtones.
"Yes," he says blunly, "we indoctrinate them in the forces. Otherwise they wouldn't fight. That's why we cut their hair the same, make them wear the same uniform, make the same salute, and march together. We indoctrinate them in order to enhance group cohesiveness. That's how you get people to fight."

Cdr O'Connell talked of the patients still under his care in Portsmouth. He spoke of one in particular. "His illness is directly attributable to the war," he said. What is the matter with him, I asked? "Reactive psychosis," he said. What is that? "Losing touch with reality, and a conflict of ideology." What sort of conflict? "He has a strong feeling that the war should never have been allowed to happen.

When the marines spat at the black people bringing things on board in Freetown we were told we couldn't report that.

Prevention, he says, is what matters. He spots the men close to breaking, takes them out of action for 72 hours, lets them sleep and sends them back into action. "They may crack again in seven days, but at least you've had another seven days front line service out of them."

Prince Andrew said that after what he'd seen he felt like joining the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, but that was after the tape had been turned off.

THE WAR is now on sale. On Monday, Independent Television News was first to hoist the flag over its stall: Battle For The Falklands, a two-hour video cassette, replaying the campaign from bra-waving send-off to tearful return, became available.

Business News: Women's Page

Women are the biggest-spending, most discriminating mass market audience in Britain today...and extremely open to persuasion by advertising. To influence them most effectively, your message must talk to them in their own environment – women's magazines.

Only from women's magazines can you get the unmistakable response that translates into sales growth and brand loyalty.

Women's magazines mean:
- the media they choose and buy for themselves
- the media they trust and respond to
- a personal one-to-one relationship

STUCK for a Christmas gift for your wife? Why not let her an official street map – she'll find her way to the shops much easier.

Recently, 317 housewives were invited into private homes and handed an iron, an ironing board and a pile of crumpled laundry. "Test our new ironing spray", we told them. "By the way, would you like a little background music?"

While they ironed away, our radio tape played away. Cunningly interspersed with commercials. Afterwards, when the housewives expected questions on the ironing spray, we startled them by testing their recall on the radio commercials. Specific details of the commercials scored nearly 70%. And that was from people who didn't think they were listening to them.

TWO YEARS ago, British publishing was going through the darkest hour of its recession. And as if moved by some kind of anti-lemming urge, editors and publishers around the country decided to invest heavily in what their collective hunch saw as the next boom, the nuke-book industry.

Their hunch has been proved correct.

Both Picador and Fontana have arranged to sell their anti-nuke books on the back of three CND lorries at tomorrow's anti-bomb march in London—a march with which the publication dates of more than a dozen new books were timed to coincide.

YOUNGSTERS who talk to policemen on the beat in South Wales are being rewarded with colour picture cards of rugby heroes.

JUMBO FISH FINGERS

Mr John Woodcock, said: "it is technically possible to talk to only 33 policemen to get the full set of 33 cards, but I suspect each child will talk to 150 policemen before getting the full set.

ULTRABRITE TOOTHPASTE

"By the time they have done that you can imagine the sort of friendship that will have developed between the police and the youngsters."

MAXWELL HOUSE

Kent Police have introduced a similar scheme featuring England's World Cup soccer stars, and other forces are expected to follow suit.

ANDREX

The Police Office is offering prizes to the first six youngsters in Cardiff who collect a full set, and police, anticipating a huge response, have printed almost a million cards. Each of the 2,000 officers on patrol in South Wales has been issued with an assortment of the cards.

Mr Woodcock emphasised that the scheme was not a gimmick.
No one's a born copper. It has to be worked at.

POLICE who made up a confession to murder by a mentally-handicapped man will not be the subjects of an inquiry.

The officers involved have been given the "strongest possible admonishment" for their conduct, but no further action has been taken.

Out of more than 16,000 complaints against the police referred to the Police Complaints Board last year the board recommended disciplinary action on 39 of the charges, its annual report revealed yesterday.

A RECRUITING drive aimed in part at ethnic minority groups has been launched by west Midlands police.

Job advertisements, showing two uniformed officers, one of West Indian origin, the other white, have been placed in newspapers pointing out that a "multi-racial society requires multi-racial police service."

"Don't worry," said the trees when they saw the axe coming, "The handle is one of us".

Take a remarkable incident in Winnipeg a few years ago. It concerned a 15-year-old high-school boy, Alex Lamb, who had written a satirical letter to his local newspaper suggesting that Santa Claus was a Communist because he wore red and distributed goods without cost, thus undermining the free-enterprise system. Two Security Service Mounties went to the boy’s school and interrogated him for half an hour. Lamb said later: “They told me that if I persisted in my dangerous beliefs they would inform prospective employers... and that no matter what my education, I would never get anything better than a pick-and-shovel job.”

“I was always taught — carry a can of salmon in your pocket. Then if you stop somebody for shoplifting and you’ve made a mistake, you can always plant the salmon and say, Well, I’ll let you off this time with a warning.”

Supermarket Manager
It is understood that about seven weeks ago the officer was in Worcester to investigate a fraud. He had to interview a local publican. On arrival he telephoned West Mercia police as a courtesy and to say that he was in the town. He suggested a drink in the police club after his job was finished.

As he was leaving the pub after the interview a police car arrived. The West Mercia officers are said to have challenged him and refused to believe his credentials. A call to Merseyside police had apparently failed to establish his identity satisfactorily. They radioed for other cars. He was taken to a police station in Worcester, where allegedly he was assaulted. The officer is said to have suffered internal injuries.
Criminals in Belfast's Republican ghetto areas will be killed, the Provisional IRA warned last night. Gang leaders will be "executed" instead of being shot in the legs and arms in back alley punishments.

And he argues that army expertise and training methods in controlling civil disorder should be adapted for police use. This section of the book ends with a quote from an unnamed officer: 'All you have to do is spray them — spray them with machine-guns'.

ASKED to investigate the house of Mr Felix Robinson in Whitewright, Texas, the agents from the Bureau of Firearms discovered four 9mm Ingram machine guns. Mr Robinson, who is the Mayor of Whitewright, said that the guns, each capable of firing 1,600 rounds a minute, would be necessary "to control the population in the event of riots after a nuclear attack. We have enough firepower to kill every man, woman and child in 22½ seconds."
More than 4,000 people, most of them under 21, were arrested in English towns and cities in the riots of July and August last year, and 700 people have so far been imprisoned as a result, a Home Office statistical bulletin reported yesterday.

Well - at least we don't have to worry about anarchy anymore.
Holocaust' is a jolly game giving you a chance to press the red button and start a nuclear war! If that seems rather morbid, think that at least when your computer is in charge nobody gets hurt...

The program puts you in control of an arsenal of atomic bombs, featuring old-fashioned 'A' bombs, bigger and better 'H' bombs and everyone's favourite, the 'N' or neutron bomb, which kills everything but doesn't damage the valuable factories that you will need when the war is over (to build some more missiles).

IN THE event of a nuclear holocaust, the United States postal service will suspend registered and express mail.

As a concession in disaster areas, postcards will be accepted without stamps.

SHOP COUNTER REVOLUTION?
THE Emergency Planning Officer for Hampshire has upset his local councillors by saying that there would be 'chaos and panic' before either a conventional or nuclear attack on Britain. 'People will probably leave work, they will march, they will demonstrate, there will be sabotage and chaos will reign supreme'. However, Wing Commander Harle is an optimist, 'so long as an Adam and Eve survived in every little hamlet and so long as they liked each other, we shall have this nation going on again.'

Mr Walesa had hoped yesterday to address his fellow workers with a declaration whose text, which had been known to Western correspondents for two days, has generally been judged mild and constructive, distancing himself from the militant underground.

"I don't want to topple the authorities, but in the best way I can I want to improve conditions and fight for the cause of the working world."

Mr Walesa said he was confident about the future. "We shall win for sure, but we must not fight," he added.

Mr Walesa said the men who came to get him had crowbars to break into his flat if necessary. But, he added: "I was prepared and did not resist. I have respect for uniforms and the men who came wore uniforms."
